

Philadelphia Region Organization Development Network May Program

"Holding the Space"

A Facilitated Discussion on a Key Element of the Change Process in Clients and Organizations

Change occurs when a client recognizes what doesn't work and chooses to move in a new direction. The practitioner's role is to create the environment of trust and safety for the truth to emerge and change to occur. Counselors, psychologists, coaches and OD practitioners skillfully manage "Holding the Space".
Join us in a discussion of both the process and the terminology.

About our panelists:

Bill Clinton, MA, Director of MS in Organizational Development & Leadership Program, PCOM

Bill brings to the ODL program a solid background in business, consulting and academic experience, from strong leadership as a line manager to experience in leadership coaching and organizational consulting. Through the ODL program he has shown students, leaders and organizations how to use a systems approach to generate transition strategies that shorten the time needed to achieve desired results. As an organizational transformation consultant, he has helped a wide range of leaders become successful in their industry, effective in their role, and to improve their quality of working life.
